Under new leadership this year, the Purdy FBLA programs continued its legacy of success at the District Leadership Conference on Feb. 5, producing 15 first-place winners, 45 medalists and 29 qualifiers for the FBLA State Leadership Conference in April. Wright concluded a successful and impactful career at Purdy, leaving behind a program built on dedication, student achievement and competitive excellence, a Purdy press release said. to Joplin after school on Friday and returning early Saturday morning for a full day of intensive rehearsals. The event culminated in an evening concert, during which each honors band performed four musical selections showcasing their preparation and talent.

Several Cassville musicians had previously secured positions in the District Honors Band following auditions last fall. These students included TJ Cash on baritone, Sterling Zucca on trumpet, Jacie Hudson on percussion, and Jonah Cupps on oboe. Selection for District Honors Band is based on individual performance and places students among the top musicians in the region.

In addition, seven Cassville students were chosen to perform with the Conference Honors Band, an ensemble composed of students nominated by high school band directors throughout the district. Cassville’s Conference Honors Band members were Wesley Garner on saxophone, Isaac Luney on percussion, Gracie Gray on clarinet, Audrey Mitchell on clarinet, Isabel Serrano on clarinet, Kimberly Hang on flute and Aubrey Conrad on percussion.

"Earning a place in either honors ensemble requires dedication, strong musicianship, and a willingness to commit extra time to rehearsals and performances," a Cassville band press release said. "The Cassville Band’s strong presence at the district level reflects the continued growth and success of the program, as well as the hard work put in by students throughout the school year. Their performances highlighted not only individual achievement but also the collective excellence of Cassville’s music program."

Along with the high school honorees, 25 Cassville Middle School band students recently auditioned for the Junior High District Honor Band. Auditions took place at Neosho in January. Earning spots in the band were: Trystan Moore, Sunny Burns, Geneva Aschwanden and Ivan Ortega.

PUBLISHER'S VIEW

KYLE TROUTMAN

El ganador super

A year ago today, I wrote a column about Kendrick Lamar’s Super Bowl halftime show, and this year, the performance by Bad Bunny was unlike any other, yet there were many similarities.

The most obvious difference was the language — his whole performance was in Spanish. I took four years of Spanish through high school and college, but I understood about as much of the lyrics as anyone who has never studied the language.

I have also never listened to Bad Bunny’s music before, because it’s in Spanish. Yet, I found a great deal of enjoyment in the performance the Puerto Rican put on.

One of the greatest things about the Super Bowl halftime show is the imagery, and it did not disappoint. The NFL playing surface was transformed into a sugar cane field, with a central stage resembling a traditional home, with traditional storefronts and tons of other native Puerto Rican imagery.

There was a marriage on stage — a bona fide marriage. The couple asked Bad Bunny to come to their wedding, and though he declined that request, he made an offer to them to get married on the Super Bowl stage. That’s pretty darn cool.

Guest appearances from Lady Gaga and Ricky Martin added a little spice, though I was a little disappointed there were not a couple more guest performances.

The best parts, by far, were the very beginning and the very end. Bad Bunny entered the stage with the name “Ocasio” across his back — not his stage name, but his family name. The first words out of his mouth (yes, in Spanish) were: “My name is Benito Antonio Martínez Ocasio. And if today I’m here at the Super Bowl, it’s because I never, never stopped believing in myself.”

That’s a message we can all stand behind in any language. At the show’s end, he named every country in North America, South America and Central America — and paraded the flag of each of the countries he named. It was a message of unity, capped with the phrase, “God Bless America.”

It invoked an old Hispanic trope, that the United States frequently use “America” to reference only one country, when the Americas encompass many more cultures and traditions than just those of the USA.

Yet, the message was not one of division, it was one of love. Plastered across the jumbotron was the phrase, “The only thing more powerful than hate is love.”

In my opinion, and you can take it or leave it, it was in stark contrast to the opposition to Bad Bunny being awarded the performance. From what I have seen on social media, many of our friends and neighbors opted for the competing halftime show, the Kid Rock-headlined Turning Point USA’s “All-American Halftime Show.”

The connotation of that phrasing is that the Super Bowl Halftime show is unAmerican because it was in another language and performed by someone that doesn’t fit the Anglo-European majority of US citizens.

Yet, Benito Antonio Martínez Ocasio, born in Puerto Rico in 1994, is an American citizen by birth, the same as Kid Rock, Brantley Gilbert, Lee Brice and Gabby Barrett. No matter whose music you prefer — and I’ve listened to way more Kid Rock in my days than Bad Bunny — the implication that Ocasio is not All-American is inherently unAmerican.

As a nation, our vast cultural differences are what make us strong. From traditions to food to music and everything in between, being American is more than what the “All-American Halftime Show” portrayed it to be. And I’ll borrow a couple paragraphs from my column last year that still stand true:

“If you did not enjoy [Bad Bunny], don’t fret! The Super Bowl has been very hip-hop and R&B driven in recent years, and judging by the history of performers, I’m anticipating a switch in demographics. The early 2000s saw many more mainstream artists center stage, like Aerosmith and NSYNC in 2001 and U2 in 2002. The lineup from 2008-2010 was Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Bruce Springsteen and the E. Street Band, and The Who.

“For me, those three years were the least memorable in the last 20, but as they say, different strokes for different folks.

“No matter who plays the halftime show next year and beyond, I hope they use it as an opportunity to entertain, but also to educate, inform and inspire.

“And if I find myself not understanding the message, I hope it makes me think.”

Feb. 11, 1976
— FOREST SHARE TO COUNTY WILL INCREASE 11 TIMES

A windfall of funds to Barry County will result in the combination of Clark and Mark Twain National Forests in Missouri, according to an announcement this week by Congressman Gene Taylor. James Roles, ranger of the Cassville District of Mark Twain, said income to the county, road districts and schools would increase about 11 times under the proposal. Congressman Taylor's office said Monday the signing of an executive order by President Ford would merge the two national forests in the southern part of the state. Funds derived from the sale of minerals, timber, grazing rights and other special use permits by the National Forest Service will be divided. The congressional office explained the Forest Service each year dispenses 25 percent of the monies collected to the various states and counties based on the number of acres that are located within the respective boundaries. Last year Barry County received $5,749 based on a payment of .11 per acre from Mark Twain. Clark forest counties received $2.07 per acre. Under the new combination, Barry County's share should increase to $1.21 per acre for the 53,000 acres in this county in the Cassville district. This would increase the fund considerably to $64,000 in fiscal 1976. Roles said forest offices in Rolla have practically settled on continuing the name Mark Twain for the entire region. The Cassville district will remain in operation, with all forest offices remaining at Rolla. Roles said the Mark Twain presently runs to Van Buren, Ava and Willow Springs. The Cassville district includes some forest area in Stone County. Congressman Taylor said about two years ago the National Forest Service combined the administration of the two areas and located all personnel in Rolla, closing the Springfield office. It became obvious to me that it would be more than official if the two forests were completely merged and I made that suggestion to the president and secretary of agriculture. I'm gratified they have concurred. Last year the State of Missouri received a total of 1.7 million dollars from the program of distribution of funds. Funds received annually are distributed to schools and road districts through the Barry County clerk's office on a formula recommended by the national government. Included are number of pupils in each district and number of miles of roads and area assessed evaluations.

A consulting engineering firm has recommended the city of Cassville close the 13th Street bridge over Flat Creek. The bridge evaluation information was asked for by the city of Cassville through the Missouri Highway Department. George Ulmer, city engineer, said he was informed Tuesday by the Springfield concern making the evaluation that the bridge should be closed. Highway department and legal advisors have recommended closing. Mayor Rolland Meador said the city was looking at the liability that might be involved. The mayor said he first advised Cassville R-4 school district officials since at least two bus routes use the bridge. The bridge involved also serves a heavily populated area of Cassville, Wildwood Estates, East 13th Street and an access to Highway 248. Ulmer said the bridge is 10 feet wide and 86 feet long. Beams in the center portion of the structure are the problem area according to the evaluation. In addition to problems of width and other safety factors, Meador said the structure had been a source of trouble for Cassville over a period of years. The narrowness of the throat of the bridge has been thought to cause back-up of Flat Creek in times of flooding. "Perhaps the time has come to seriously consider doing something if a crossing is to be maintained on 13th Street," Meador said. "It's quite possible an 80-20 project with Barry County would be possible with the availability of additional sales tax funds recently approved," the mayor observed. City officials would be in conference later this week to set an exact closing date of the crossing if this in fact was the eventual decision.

— THREE LANE MAIN STREET IN $1.2 MILLION HIGHWAY PLAN

Major improvements on Business Route 37 in Cassville and Highway 112, costing an estimated $1.2 million, will be proposed by the Missouri Highway and Transportation Department. Joseph Mickes, district engineer, made the information known this week in a Cassville Rotary Club appearance. Mickes, going to Jefferson City for a headquarters assignment with the department, introduced his replacement, Ken Stalcup, who will be engineer of District Seven, headquartered in Joplin. Highway people have been considering the project, including some signalization and three-laning for a number of years. Relieving of flooding problems between First and Third Streets is also in the plan. Cassville municipal efforts would be tied to the plan. Mickes said the project would run from one-half mile east of Highway 37 four-way stop to south of Route 248 on Highway 112 near the entrance to Southern Hills subdivision. Included would be widening, resurfacing and installing a left turn lane. One mile in length, lanes would be 12'-14'-12' permitting turn lanes and exploiting through traffic. A traffic signal would be located at the Business 37 intersection with Routes 112-76-248. Another feature would be widening the 56-year-old Flat Creek Bridge to 22 feet. On Main Street, the project would begin one-half way between Fifth and Sixth Streets. There will be an extra lane at the 112-248 intersection, but no signalization. The project obviously will neck down to get across the Flat Creek bridge, then widen again to provide three lanes in the heavy travel area. On the south part of Business 37, the project will run from the connection of Main Street and the by-pass fill that connects with Highway 37 west of town. Mickes said the project was not in 1986 programs by the Highway Department. He said planning would be completed by district offices for presentation to the commission probably in July. It could be on construction plans by 1988, the engineer estimated. Designed to better handle traffic in a heavy commercial area, the three-laning would cover traffic counts that are high. Don Hershberger of the District Seven office

50 YEARS AGO: IT'S GETTING READY TIME — The ardent type fly fisherman ties his own lures, and this is the time to make sure the favorite type is in ample supply. Jim Rogers, concessionaire at Roaring River State Park, furnished this example in preparation for opening activities March 1. Most fly tiers feel their special combination of materials, colors and just the right application of both are what produce the best results in pursuit of the wily trout.

es said today's counts are running about 8,302 vehicles daily from 11th Street south to the T-intersection between Fifth and Fourth Streets. The east arm of the project, Route 36 and Business 37 carries 7,376 vehicles daily, the leg from Fifth Street south of Main Street 8,302. Mickes said the design of the project was such that would carry traffic in the downtown area anticipated at 10,360 daily by the year 1996. "That's just 10 years away," the engineer noted. Preliminary plans in the project include some curbing at the main intersection where signalization will be used. Mickes said the highway property inside the curb areas would be leased to the City of Cassville for adjoining commercial parking. Highway plans for a major project in the busy intersection area approximately 10 years ago were dropped by the department when commercial opposition was expressed. Highway officials said the project could be completed when funds were available since no additional right-of-way would be required.

— ROARING RIVER HATCHERY CREWS PLAN STOCKING STRATEGY FOR OPENER

The Missouri Department of Conservation expects more than 2,500 anglers at Roaring River on opening day, weather conditions permitting. Hatchery Manager Jerry Dean reports that the hatchery staff is busy preparing for March 1. At least 5,500, 12-inch rainbow trout will be stocked in addition to the 1,900, 14-inch trout and 113 lunkers already in the stream for the winter catch and release program. Twenty-five more three-to-six pound lunkers will be added before opening day. Trout will be distributed evenly throughout the stream with about 228 trout in each of Roaring River's 33 fishing holes. An additional 300 fish will be stocked in the management area below the park. Water conditions have been lower than normal this winter due to a relatively low amount of precipitation. The recent snow melts have increased the river's flow, but it is still below normal, according to Dean. Crews have been busy removing more than 2,665 cubic yards of gravel from six holes in the stream this winter. Two other bank stabilization projects are planned for the fly area as soon as weather improves and the park receives permits from the Corps of Engineers. In February, MDC initiated the new Point of Sale system for selling permits. The Roaring River hatchery staff began selling permits on the system Feb. 1. Although the permit system was designed with a large database and easy access, it does take a little more time to purchase the permit the first time. Dean advises fishermen to purchase permits before coming to the park on opening day. Lines for permit sales will probably be slower this year. The park will continue its opening day tradition of honoring an individual who is significant in the park's history by presenting James Woods with the first tag of the 1996 season. Woods, a longtime trout fisherman and outdoorsman, was a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps and helped construct the hatchery at Roaring River during the 1930s. He has been the secretary/treasurer of CCC Co. 1713 for 40 years.

— LOCAL PHYSICIAN JOINS PEACE KEEPING MISSION IN BOSNIA

The first National Guard unit to be deployed in support of the United States' peace keeping mission in Bosnia will travel with a local physician on board. Dr. Tom Harris, a family practice physician with Roaring River Family Medicine Clinic in Cassville, will spend two weeks at Aviano Air Base in northern Italy, serving as flight surgeon with the 184th Fighter Squadron of the Arkansas Air National Guard. Harris is one of the 200 guardsmen in his squadron assigned to Mission Decisive Edge. The squadron of F-16s, pilots and support personnel leave for Italy on March 6. The squadron's primary mission, according to Harris, will be to patrol and protect the no-fly zone over Bosnia. As part of the peace accords, Bosnians, Serbs and Croats are banned from flying fixed-wing and rotary-wing aircraft in the airspace of Bosnia-Herzegovina. The squadron's secondary mission includes providing close air support to troops on the ground and conducting approved air strikes against designated targets that threaten the security of UN-declared safe areas. As the squadron's flight surgeon, Harris' job is to keep the 20 pilots and 180 support personnel healthy. He will work out of an air transportable clinic, which will be set up at the air base. Harris also expects to fly at least one sortie over the no-fly zone. He said flight surgeons routinely fly with pilots so that they can observe the pilot's environment and experience physiological conditions and stress factors. The Arkansas squadron will be cooperating with other multinational units based at Aviano. According to the flight commander, squadrons from the United States, Italy and France will be flying out of Aviano. On an international level, NATO aircraft are also stationed at other air bases in France, Germany, Greece, Italy, the United Kingdom and on carriers in the Adriatic.

Squadrons from Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Turkey, Britain and the U.S. have been deployed as part of Decisive Edge. Harris has been in the military ever since he was 18. From 1973 to 1978, he served in the U.S. Army as a special forces medic. He then left the army to attend college. While at the University of Arkansas, he continued to serve as a medic in the Arkansas National Guard. He then received a military scholarship to medical school, serving as a United States Air Force reserve during that time. Harris completed his three-year residency at Scott Air Force Base and then served an additional four years at Wheeler Air Force Base and Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii. Harris has reached the rank of major and successfully completed the Top Knife fighter surgeon's course in 1993. He trains monthly with the 184th Fighter Squadron, which is based in Ft. Smith, Ark. In talking about the United States peacekeeping role in Bosnia, Harris said he believes the government has a valid mission there. He added that the United States has a moral obligation to make sure fighting among the warring parties ends and peace prevails. Harris said his overseas deployment will end March 22. His squadron is scheduled to fly a training mission to Australia for 30 days in late June and July. His involvement in that mission is still undetermined.

Haven of the Ozarks Pet of the Week

Hi I'm Chevelle! I am told I am absolutely adorable and they are so right about that. I'm not really sure of my parents but they guess I'm a Shepherd/Terrier mix and that my birthday is Nov. 7, 2025. My sister and I can't believe that our human just abandoned us on the road. How rude! The people at the Haven are treating us really nice but we think it would be fun to have a family we can call our own. I like my sister but I'm open to going into a home without her. I just really want us both to find a family who treats us like the royalty we are! Adopters can complete an application at www.havenoftheoarkzarks.org/adopt. No appointment is needed. Missouri Association of School Administrators planned a legislative review of bills under consideration by the Missouri General Assembly and initiatives pushed by Gov. Mike Kehoe. One called for requiring 70% of elementary school assignments to use pen and paper. State Rep. Tricia Byrnes, R-Wentzville, the bill's sponsor, argued digital instruction had lowered literacy rates. The bill also mandates teaching cursive writing and limiting digital instruction.

Graham pledged to keep board members versed on the latest proposals to improve advocacy for the district.

A report on the district's showing on the state's Annual Performance Review has been delayed while Graham contests some of the numbers in the report. He anticipated making his review at the February board meeting.

In the elementary school report, Principal Julie Dalton noted math teacher Nicole Crouthamel has provided Tier 3 intervention to students below grade level for third through sixth graders. Crouthamel provided an example of a student who could not count or write numbers, and within a week he could count to 100 and recognize patterns. She was also working on teaching how to tell time from an analog clock.

The January professional development session focused on standard-base reference and grading practice training from STEP-UP. Dalton also reviewed the student Christmas program and staff celebration. The Care To Learn program recognized Donna Terry and Dyanna Yarbrow as top donors. Others were identified for their dedication. The Parents As Teachers program extended a special thanks to the First Free Will Baptist Church of Purdy for sponsoring the December book giveaway.

Graham, as interim high school principal, recounted the Hall of Fame induction luncheon for the high school girls basketball team from 1980 to 1982.

Purdy will host the boys district basketball tournament on February 24, 26 and 28.

Ongoing work by staff has focused on identifying gaps in curriculum and instruction to put appropriate resources in place to improve student performance. Graham cited standards referenced grading that focuses on clearly defined learning standards, rather than averaging points from assignments, behavior, or extra credit. He noted, "Overall, Standards-Referenced Grading provides more meaningful feedback, promotes equity, and helps high school students better understand and improve their learning."

Graham added the new structure of the SOAR hour has enabled teachers in core subjects to work with students in smaller settings, allowing tutoring-style interventions.

Lady Wildcats head to Buffalo for districts

BY KYLE TROUTMAN

ktroutman@cassville-democrat.com

After having just one state qualifier last year — sixth-place finisher Analeigh Winchell — the Cassville girls wrestling team is hoping to make more noise this week at the Class 1, District 3 Tournament in Buffalo.

Casey Parsons, Cassville girls wrestling coach, said a young roster and steady growth have defined the season as her team prepares for the postseason.

“This season, we’re a young team,” Parsons said. “We have our juniors leading the team, Analeigh and Isabella Bauman, and that has been good. The girls have grown so much. Analeigh was our only one to make it to state last year, and I think we have a good shot at three to four of them to make it this year, depending on how they wrestle this weekend.”

Bauman wrestles at 100 pounds and brings a record of 30-5 to Buffalo, and at 105 pounds is AJ Deaver, with a record of 28-10. Anna Vanderhoef also has a great shot to qualify, but will be on a quick turnaround from a non-sports injury.

“She just come back today from a concussion, so she’s been out for a couple weeks,” Parsons said. “She has a great shot as long as everything goes fine this week in practice, and I look for her to make the top four at districts and punch her ticket to state.”

Parsons said Winchell, wrestling at 155 pounds with a record of 40-4 at 155, has set the goal of topping the podium at districts.

The remainder of the district lineup, Parsons said, is a large class of freshmen.

“Gracie Farsungchin is my 120-pounder,” Parsons said. “Hopelyne Thompson is at 125, Myah Dunfee is 130, Estrella Garcia is 140, and Alexis Lands is 170.”

Though the majority of the squad are newcomers to district action, Parsons said the schedule this year has been built to prepare the group for postseason conditions.

“We have been to a lot of big tournaments this year to prepare us,” Parsons said. “Eldon is a big tournament that looks a lot like districts. I think there were 14 schools there from our district, and we did good.”

Parsons said the approach is to treat districts like another event while recognizing the added challenges.

“It’s another tournament, but it has a lot higher stakes, and hopefully

Lady Wildcats 2-1 on the week, topple Monett

Cassville posted a 2-1 overall record, including a pair of Big 8 wins, in a three-game effort last week. The Lady Wildcats traveled to rival Monett on Feb. 2, where both teams entered the game at 13-5 and battled back and forth for three quarters before finally creating a little space in the final frame, going on to win the game 57-47. Audrey Kennedy led in scoring with 16, Aubrey Stoufer added 12, Alex Holycross put in 9, Taylor Kennedy had 8, Brylee Gross finished with 7 and Briley Artherton scored 5. The junior varsity squad also won, 17-7. On Feb. 4, Cassville welcomed Lamar to town in a makeup game from the previous week. The Lady Wildcats led throughout the game and came out with a 61-36 win. Holycross put in 24, Audrey Kennedy had 12, Taylor Kennedy also scored 12, Gross put in 6, Artherton had 5 and Aubrie Atkinson contributed 2. The junior varsity was again victorious, 45-27. ## Wrestling: Tournaments this season prepare squad for districts the girls' nerves are ready for it because of our schedule," she said.

In the final week before districts, Parsons said practice will revolve around specific technical goals.

"Each girl has something they are working on, whether it's wrestling the full three periods, getting off bottom, or take-downs," she said. "We're going to fine-tune those this week and focus on the end to punch those tickets."

Parsons said Winchell has taken on a larger leadership role in practice, especially with so many younger teammates.

"In the practice room last week, she stepped it up and was holding those girls accountable," Parsons said. "She's telling them she's been to state and wants to go again, and if they're going to make it, they have to work harder."

Parsons said that leadership has been important late in the season.

"She's pushing them on what they need to do and stepping up leadership-wise to help these younger girls get to the state tournament," she said.

With matches beginning at 4 p.m. on Friday and 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, Parsons said the team's travel plans, which include an overnight stay in Bolivar, are designed to keep athletes rested for the two-day event.

"We try to stay at least one two-day tournament so the girls get the feel of it and know how that is," Parsons said. "They get the excitement of staying away from their parents, but we have a responsibility and a job to get done. I have really responsible girls, so I'm not concerned about that at all."

Parsons said timing and distance made an overnight stay the practical choice.

"It's about an hour and 50 minutes, and wrestling on Friday night doesn't get over until about 9:30 or 10 p.m., or later," Parsons said. "We're going to stay about 20 minutes away so we can get them in bed at a decent time and they can be well-rested to wrestle on Saturday morning."

With most of the roster new to the postseason, Parsons said expectations are still developing.

"I have a lot of freshmen, and they've never experienced this postseason," Parsons said. "The only three that have experienced the postseason are Analeigh, AJ and Anna."

Parsons said the younger wrestlers understand the basics of what is at stake but have not yet felt it firsthand.

"They're excited for districts and excited to work hard to make it to state," Parsons said. "They know they need to be in the top four to make it to state, but until they punch their ticket or make that bubble match or the semis or the finals, they don't understand the extent of it yet."

Parsons said the team mindset remains steady entering the tournament.

"We've prepared them pretty good, and they feel like it's a big tournament that we're traveling to and they've got a job to do," Parsons said.

Looking more long-term, the goal is for the experience to build motivation for future seasons.

"I hope they all come back out and the experience gives them that feeling," Parsons said. "If they don't make it to state this year, it gives them that drive to set that as their goal for next year."

Middle school hoops teams go undefeated last eek

Cassville Middle School boys basketball teams had a strong week on the court, with both the seventh- and eighth-grade squads going undefeated in three games. The seventh-grade team opened the week with a dominant 41-12 victory over Granby. The Wildcats followed that performance with a 40-22 win at Mt. Vernon and closed the week with a 53-14 victory over Hollister. Strong defensive pressure and balanced scoring helped Cassville control each contest from start to finish. The eighth-grade team also turned in an outstanding week. Cassville defeated Granby 45-37 before earning a 47-27 road win at Mt. Vernon. The Wildcats capped off the week with a convincing 54-16 victory over Hollister, using their defensive intensity and team play to secure the sweep. Following this week's action, the seventh-grade team improves to 9-3 on the season, while the eighth-grade squad moves to 11-1 as both teams continue to build momentum heading into the final stretch.
